Synopsis. Thirty-nine-year-old Sirine, never married, lives with a devoted Iraqi-immigrant uncle and an adoring dog named King Babar. She works as a chef in a Lebanese restaurant, her passions aroused only by the preparation of food—until an unbearably handsome Arabic literature professor starts dropping by for a little home cooking. Falling in love brings Sirine's whole heart to a boil—stirring up memories of her parents and questions about her identity as an Arab American.

Abu-Jaber (Arabian Jazz) weaves the story of a love affair between a comely chef and a handsome, haunted Near Eastern Studies professor together with a fanciful tale of a mother's quest to find her wayward son in this beautifully imagined and timely novel, which explores private emotions and global politics with both grace and conviction.

— Crescent: A Novel on Apple Books
— Diana Abu-Jaber, Crescent One of the ways this book dances along the romance or chick lit line is Abu-Jaber ' s lush descriptions of making and eating foods. That statement sounds pejorative, but as much as I liked the Sirine and Han storyline, this food porn might be what I remember longest from the book.

Crescent—Diana Abu-Jaber—Book Review
Crescent is a memoir of her time in Jordan, her fathers homeland and about some of her upbringing in America and the bigotry and ignorance they faced being an inter-cultural family. Its about identity and independence and allowing the Arabian in her to inform the American woman she became.
