The product was incubated at 25 C and tested for the presence of viable L. monocytogenes over a 12 month period. It was concluded that L. monocytogenes does not grow in pocket sandwiches, including pocket sandwiches that are grossly misformulated. Listeria monocytogenes growth is, therefore, not a "hazard reasonably likely to occur" in these products and there is no need to include L. monocytogenes as an hazard in the HACCP plan. However the vulnerabilities which need addressing are dictated by the individual country according to the food control systems in place, the nature of the food industry and the culture of the country. This book summarises the presentations of a NATO Advanced Training Course addressing the issue of food security in Central Asia. The book is divided into two sections. The first provides an overview of the existing aspects of food security in participating Central Asian countries. The emphasis here is
