The type of slave girl that Ayyub praises were unusual, so expensive and exquisite because they were indeed intended for the elite, the period's super-rich. These were exceptional products of a horrific selection process steeped in human cruelty. These slave girls are little known other than by their names (chosen by their masters), the formally freed in 1852. After corresponding with Harriet Beecher Stowe, Harriet Ann Jacobs was inspired to write her life story. After playing an active role in the antislavery movement, she died in Washington, D.C., in 1897.
